A story in Friday's edition about two lawsuits filed by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters over right to work legislation contained errors.

Speaker of the House of Delegates Tim Armstead is not a named defendant, as Friday's story said, in a suit filed in Kanawha County Circuit Court against the State of West Virginia (the Senate of West Virginia) and Senate President Bill Cole. Armstead's name is mentioned in one of the lawsuit's statement of facts.

The second suit filed by the Teamsters against the West Virginia Board of Governors in Monongalia County does not list Professor of Business and Economics John Deskins as a defendant, as was stated Friday. However, Deskins' name is mentioned throughout the suit as having email contact with Senate President Cole, Cole's staff counsel and staff counsel for Speaker Armstead
